

THEME: Most of the employees who are members of Senault's communication hierarchy were generally disqualified for their employment positions under mainstream society's standards. The unqualified became the majority. So they made a pact, part of their shared secret to conceal their incompetence by a quiet anarchy that upturned society by filtering members in by positions, namely service workers, blue collar labourers and middling management. Their secret was to have the unqualified made normal to accept lowered standards and in turn, they would 'vote' as to which light hue male of mediocre work ethic and lackadaisical standards would be amenable if they and management concealed the evidence of their lack of employability and lack of competence and compliance with basic business standards. That was two secrets.

The all wanted revenge for being passed over due to too high standards for jobs that they were not qualified for. IT was a dark hue male leader of the so-called grassroots organization that was a front for the acronym sexual orientation movement, who in an interview with a light hue male journalist of mainstream broadcast news who indeed provide a most disturbing response to the interviewers' question. It was near the time when the then two-hue male national governance leader invited their national representative to the White House to which they rejected. The news reporter asked him poignantly, "What exactly do you want?" The dark hue male squirmed. He may have sucked his teeth as a prelude to what would be an affront to all that which the true dark hue ones of decades past, of the 'Civil Rights' old guard fought for—equality. Indeed with these vagrants to dark hue ones, who fought be from the scenes of social causes their immediate form as maintained and accelerated the corruption of DNA Sequence as subhuman and semi humans and infiltrated Senault's communication hierarchy years later. This dark hue one, who claimed to be communication hierarchy years later. This dark hue one, who claimed to be communication hierarchy years later. This dark hue one, who claimed to be a representative said, "We want lowered standards." Had there been an audience present, Peradāyah believed a collective gasp would have been likely heard. Had some members of the old guard of the true dark hue ones of ethnicity of that land mass been present, he might have been shot; at least sat down for disrupting the established legacy. Separate but equal was the standard for normalcy, for those who knew that they were equally qualified, but systematically discriminated against. All of those vagrants, vagabonds, inhabited and mortals with dim lights retained were never qualified to be among those of civilized mainstream society, but somehow inverted the civil rights legacy. They admitted that they were not equal to the light hue male or any other qualified person regardless of race or ethnicity. They in their virulent low self-worth embraced the false doctrine of hue supremacy under Senault's guidance, through their networks of pseudo comradery. However, they voluntarily disenfranchised themselves by deferring their vote to the light hue female. They and all of those who were in agreement with their secrets and their side seals were the antithesis of what the true land mass was evolving to. No wonder that dark hue males said with his light hue female who coddled her male complement at the Aviation Hub of the kingdom, "You have no rights," to Peradāyah . The dark hue ones of Senault's communication hierarchy voluntarily surrendered their rights carte blanc to be the stereotypical jester of the world stage to reserve, without question, social treats, which primarily entailed disrespecting Peradāyah and committing crimes against humanity against her. Middle management of mainstream society was the melded formulation of the superimposed hierarchy. Certain employees such as the dark hue males, planted through recommendations and after recruitment to join Senault's communication hierarchy and perform the exchange, who were already hierarchal members certain businesses and institutions in particular cities all harassed Peradāyah for years and acted as her life blockers, including the most recent theft of her personal property and luggage. They were the cholesterol of Peradāyah's arteries. Their purpose in clogging her life's follow that was to stagnate Peradāyah's advancement in her major scroll, pause her relaxation, disrupt her relocation in the kingdom, hoping that she would yield to their blockage and prevent her from being wed to Prince Aleum. They would not say so often, but they claimed the endorsement of his initial bonded mate former, who was already to be sat down by royal decree¹.

¹ See Excerpt dated 12/06/2023 from The Alchemic Kingdoms: The Final Battle For Light (The Opening of Water), Book No. 8: There was no inversion. Both places conducted themselves the same way for months. This was their pattern. Pattern was yet another negation of their proclaimed belief system of chaos to produce order by doing things backwards. One of Senault's backdoor deals. Give the middling hued female performer a continued storyline in a pictorial recording in his major employ which represents that Near Eastern south Asian country's populace = representation and the funding and Senault, Prince Aleum's initial bonded mate former receives a portion of the $16 billion distribution.

Part of Gamemaster was supposedly to find Senault a wife, but the reality was to find Prince Aleum his true wife as his initial bonded mate former was a placeholder. She was of low breeding, but at minimum was heal. They were to birth offspring and heirs to the throne. Prince Aleum already told her years ago that she would be with him for only a time. Her time expired between 2022 and 2023. An uncanny incident happened while Peradāyah was at the Edifice of Scrolls on November 16, 2023. She had only six minutes left on her computer time. Peradāyah calculated the day as $[1 + 6] = 7$. The 6 cancelled the seven. The year was still 2023 which she computed as $[2 + 0 + 2 + 3] = 7$. The day was Thursday, the day which members of Senault's communication hierarchy still decided to use as the main ammunition day to cause Peradāyah social distress. Thursday is the sixth day, counting from the traditional Sabbath of the week. Thus that seven cancelled out this six. Peradāyah approached the charcoal dark hued male clerk to ask for more time on the computer. He scrunched his face and looked at his computer as if to delay his response and likely run the last remaining minutes out. Before he answered, a tall light hued female, one whom Peradāyah perceived as inclining towards other women and was part of the networks of observers and reporters said directly to Peradāyah while her focus remained on the actual labourer she addressed, "You've had your time." Peradāyah thought the same about Prince Aleum's initial bonded mate former not too many minutes later. 'She had her time.' There was no more time left for her and Prince Aleum had to make haste to retrieve Peradāyah from that land mass and bring her home to him and to the kingdom permanently.

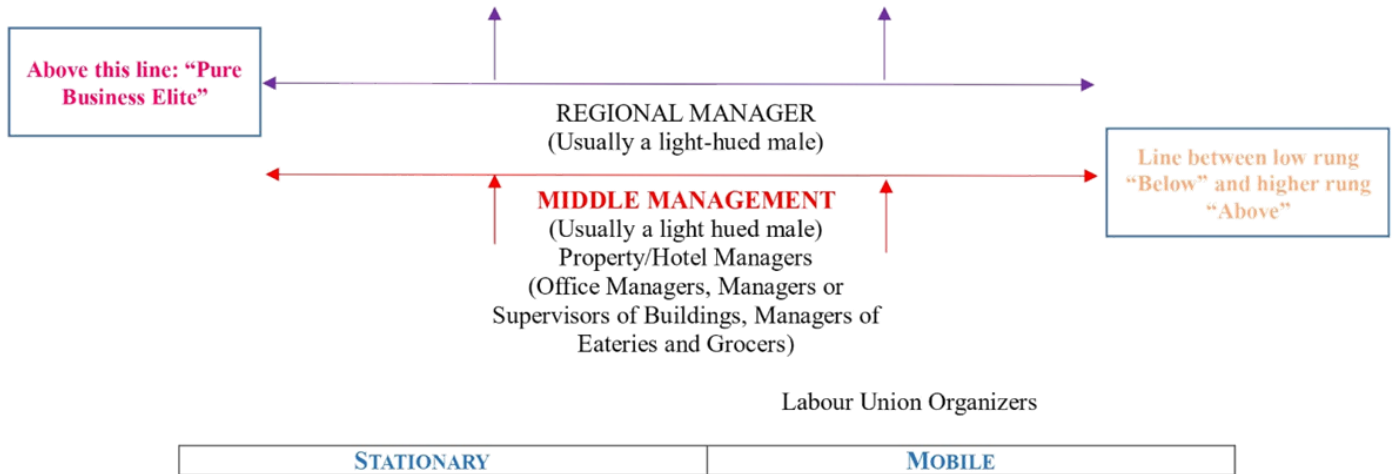

She refused to leave quietly as she was now fully an inhabited. Senault was her Navigator. Based on certain decisions by the elite post-Gamemaster, they made a stipulation with Senault and his communication hierarchy, who were of the left that because they lost, operated at a deficit and intended to fully execute their treason against that land mass, they had to get Peradāyah's approval for their activities in the future. They continued to torture her knowing with complete understanding that she would not tolerate, approve nor affirm any acts that they committed or planned to commit against her. The elites' decision affected Prince Aleum's former bonded mate, who, if she were to perform any activity outside the authority and auspices of the Crown and independently would have to seek Peradāyah's approval as she was a full participant in the war crimes and other criminal acts committed against Peradāyah. Thus, his bonded mate's abuse of Prince Aleum became more public and obvious, making her guilty of treason against the Crown and the kingdom. The now king decided in the best interest of the parties, to support the line of succession, to secure Peradāyah to the kingdom and the monarch and have her safely sequestered with the heir-apparent, a prince Aleum through safe passage, arrival and permanent stay in preparation for their nuptials, to remove certain titles, all access, all privileges to them, royal patronages, equipment, authority, treasure, jewels, other real. And personal property in perpetuity and to absolutely without option of revocation of such royal declaration to sit Prince Aleum's initial bonded mate down henceforth and forevermore. The now king has so declared.

Middle management becomes the crux between lower rung and above for presentation side of pretending that nothing has really changed except for their presence and manner of operations. Seeping their wicked intent without the stagnate appearance of obvious attention would increase the likelihood of acceptance by unsuspecting mortals with retained lights who are unofficially of the spectrum. Thus, Senault's communication hierarchy and the superimposed hierarchy committed to cement the melding of their hierarchies through philosophies of inversion, Jindin, alchemy were simply rouses with a voodoo practice to heighten the deceit that many of their members were incompetent before with no purpose who should have never been recruited with power or authority even temporarily—even as an experiment. Middle management became the glue that holds these hierarchies in place as all of them perform their practice through their employ which is why dark-hued males who hunted Peradāyah to try to rape and impose vulgarity and contradictions on her while yelping for her to “get a job” and “what’s your plan” so that they could invert her purpose that the Unseen Hand destined for her and the permanent life blockers that it could never be ascertained. Peradāyah thus constructed a “Middle Management” charting that included all the positions that most hires likely worked in and Senault's communication hierarchy overlay version. When Peradāyah noticed that rules of a past game were never enforced and all that their superiors did was make their members not work as remotely as before, she also noticed, an increase of tense silence among those whose employ naturally required for them to work in person the entire time by the nature of their duties, such as service workers. Senault's communication hierarchy never granted Peradāyah the justice after racially, ideologically and ethnically profiling her and gender discriminating against her with dark hued males arguing that “a nigga that has escaped the numeral six plantation called that land mass,...” sharecropping her life by exacerbating a debt originally $500 into the thousands by severing her access to reasonable resources so that they could continue to put her on display to appeal to the pedophile, racist light hued male national governance leader, placate the new norm of governance diminished from a meritocracy to a mediocrity and a form of democracy to a totalitarianism, ex post facto, Anti-Semitic national governance with Peradāyah as their sole target and sacrifice to continue to operate on the numeral six 6 while attempting to destroy, and if not, incapacitate those of the numeral seven (7). Peradāyah thus crafted the Middle management charting where “get a job” cry of the dark hued males was to implore members of Senault's communication hierarchy to use their employ and its daily operations as well as resources to oppress innocents as part of fulfillment of their social membership dues. What she would realize after recalling her own prior experiences in the workforce and the copious amounts of customer service complaints she had to file with businesses over the years was that middle management was more than just manager and employees. She remembered from truly functioning businesses and nongovernmental institutions that their structure required organizational charts to be in compliance with certain federal and state regulations and to qualify for certain funding. The more experience the business, the more intricate the appearance of an organization could appear. Senault of Senault had his own organization built within his communication hierarchy. There existed in the midst of his die-hard and steadfast loyal followers, the Institution of Senault. Just as the current mediocre and nonchalant current management were likely those who were passed over for managerial and general manager positions in the past, Senault was unqualified to manage the dark hued ones let alone businesses. Peradāyah remember that when she lived in the island, Senault through his attached middling extended evil one, would house himself in different employees attempting to impress Peradāyah that he could perform daily duties of a practical job, but often messed up the assignment or made matters more complicate than necessary. Similar to his overall scheme of his connection to Peradāyah . She realized when the discovery of her destiny was to be wed to Prince Aleum. Thus, with the agreement of lower standards, whose who were originally qualified stepped into the role of management, heavily relying on security guards to help conceal their incompetence by threat, intimidation, and theft and otherwise exceeding their authority, reflecting he uniformed version of all members of Senault's communication hierarchy that were civilian correctional officers to innocents in their inversion of the rule of law and civilized society with the Negro henchmen doing what they always did, using violence, corruption, threat and intimation, blackmail, extortion as the means to woefully and unjustifiably obtain, the respect of the average consumer, visitor, guest or patron of any facility, business, institution or organization. Peradāyah immediately presented her Middling Management Charting to Prince Aleum:

They deposit vagrants and vagabonds of Senault's superimposed hierarchy in departments and general areas of Edifice of Scrolls, grocers or other public spaces by social gesture. The most often used social gestures by security guards and walking to the area, lingering and then waiting only a few seconds or more after the vagrant dispatch takes his seat. The other social gesture is to walk past a chair, bench or table and 'tag' or tap any of those pieces of the furniture at least one time either by open hand or a knock. The security leaves before the vagrant or vagabond arrives within seconds to minutes to pretend that his appearance as agitator, mischiefmaker and blocker to productivity of innocents was just happenstance. Peradāyah called this form of social treachery as 'Dropshot'¹ Deposit'. The gold car driving dispatchers assign dark hued male vagrant and vagabonds to location. Security guards if location or business provides the direct signal to dropped off member. They provide entertainment for the light hued ones of Senault's communication hierarchy. The dark hued ones are loud, dirty, unkempt and generally harass, sexually harass, verbally accost nonmembers to continue to receive "social treats" and continue their membership within the hierarchy. Hiring Manager generally reports dispatch capabilities for potential recruit. Security guards are the point of contact for [1] Human Trafficking rings, [2] Theft rings, and [Prostitution rings]. They act as co-conspirators in grand theft ring, which acts as the 'holding company' of smaller theft rings, such as the government sponsored phones. Security guards use dark hued males assigned by 4 door sedan Gold car driving dispatchers as primary criminals.

Floor Manager is always a supervisor but not all industries have floor managers and not all supervisors are floor managers. There could be an intermediate floor manager or supervisor switching hierarchal roles in the industry. A general supervisor has a higher rank than a floor manager, but both deal with daily operations of institution or business.
